About The Theme

With the emergence of the concept of the welfare state and industrial revolution in all most all countries for raising the living standard of common man, consumer protection has assumed great importance in modern jurisprudence. "Consumerism" is a movement directed to protect the consumers to ensure in term of satisfaction that the consumer gets the best return in exchange for the money he spends. Thus "consumers are to economics what voters are to politics". In an environment of limited choice, inadequate supplies, incomplete information of consumer goods and services and ignorant consumers, it is inevitable that the consumer protection laws must be perfect and result oriented.

As a result of globalization, liberalization and e-commerce, India has become one of the largest potential markets in the world. In the contemporary economic world, therefore, consumers are needed to be protected from the dishonest suppliers of consumer goods and service providers especially in the field of telecom, banking, insurance, electricity, medical and education etc. In this regards, the provisions of The Consumer Protection Act, 1986 are required to be discussed and analyzed in order to further strengthen the various consumer forums established under the said Act for the settlement of consumer disputes in India.

Thus, the seminar is to discuss current issues and challenges of the consumer rights in the light of the legal provisions operative in India.
