THE EFFECTS OF STIMULANTS ON MILK CONSUMPTION

It is well known that the use of stimulants such as caffeine and nicotine can affect the rate of milk consumption in young children. The present study was designed to investigate the effects of these substances on milk intake in a group of 100 children aged 1-3 years.

The children were divided into two groups: a control group and a stimulant group. The control group received a placebo, while the stimulant group received a solution containing caffeine and nicotine. The children were then observed over a period of 24 hours, and their milk consumption was recorded.

The results of the study showed that the children in the stimulant group consumed significantly more milk than those in the control group.

The authors conclude that the use of stimulants can increase milk consumption in young children.

It is suggested that parents should be aware of the potential effects of stimulants on their children's milk intake. If a child is consuming more milk than usual, it may be a sign that they are using stimulants.
